INFORMATION REGARDING ASSESSMENT OF STALE QUALIFICATIONS

In any case where a ‘qualification for admission’ is more than 10 years old at the time that a candidate for admission applies to the NZCLE for a completion certificate, the NZCLE may, in its discretion, assess such qualification, and may impose further study, examinations or training on the candidate.

For New Zealand LLB degree holders, a ‘qualification for admission’ means a New Zealand LLB (or LLB with Hons), any subject of examination (i.e. the CLE core subjects), a university course in Legal Ethics, the Professional Legal Studies Course.

For overseas law graduates or lawyers, a ‘qualification for admission’ means any determination issued to such person in relation to an application for assessment of the overseas qualifications, or any degree subject, the New Zealand Law and Practice Examination, legal ethics course, practical legal training course or English requirement prescribed by NZCLE (or the New Zealand Law Society if the assessment was carried out before 2008) pursuant to that determination.

The effect of this time limit is that qualifications may have become ‘stale’ prior to application for a completion certificate, and in such cases, the NZCLE has a discretion to impose further degree courses, or to require passing of an examination in the law and practice of New Zealand, or a legal ethics course, or the Professional Legal Studies Course.

If any of your qualifications are over 10 years old by the time you apply for a completion certificate, you will need to apply for a staleness assessment and complete any requirements imposed, before you may apply for your completion certificate. Schedule 1 to this information sheet is a staleness assessment application form.

In the subsequent years, you may have refreshed stale qualifications. Please include a current CV, and if you are providing information to show that your stale qualification has been refreshed, please include a letter setting out the ways in which you are demonstrating this. Please also note the evidential requirements.

Below we list examples of areas which the Council will consider when assessing your stale qualifications.

Subsequent University Study

You may have studied other subjects at university which are not stale, and which you believe have refreshed the stale subject. You will need to provide an original transcript evidencing that you have passed any such course.

Work Experience

You may have gained subsequent work experience in an area of law which has refreshed the stale subject. You will need to provide details of any such employment including the date and length of time employed, and describe the work experience. You will also need to provide original references from employers confirming your employment and experience.

Teaching Experience

You may have taught or tutored in an area of law which refreshes the stale subject. You will need to provide original evidence of this teaching experience, and include confirmation from the body at which you were employed detailing the nature of your teaching experience and the date and duration of your teaching experience.

Participation at Conferences, Seminars, Webinars or through Research

If you have attended or undertaken any of the above, the Council may take this into account in making its assessment. You will need to provide evidence of the duration and content of these activities, as well as independent verification that the courses were attended, or completed. The Council will take into account the level at which the courses or research was conducted, and also their duration.

You should note that the Council can only undertake an assessment at the point when you apply for a completion certificate. If you have partially completed admission requirements prescribed by the Council, which include stale components, you should be aware that on completion of all requirements a stale qualification application will have to be made.
